Listed below are media organizations that have consulted ICSA on cult-related stories. This is only a partial list, for our staff was not always able to enter a written record of conversations with journalists. Moreover, ICSA advisors also speak extensively to journalists, and do not always keep a record. It should be noted that many media organizations contact us many times over the years.

Appendix Five

ICSA Workshops

ICSA offers regularly scheduled and specially arranged small-group workshops for former members of abusive groups, and the families, spouses, and friends of people involved in abusive groups. The workshops offer extensive interaction between workshop leaders and participants. Typically, 10-25 people will participate. The workshops provide practical information and a healing atmosphere for individuals struggling with the sometimes long-term aftereffects of an abusive group experience or the confusion, frustration, and fear that people often experience when a loved one becomes involved in an abusive group.

All sessions are led by individuals knowledgeable about group psychological abuse and the special needs of former members of abusive groups and family and friends concerned about group members or former members. Some workshops are a part of AFF conferences. For information on upcoming workshops, contact AFF.

Ex- Member Workshops

These workshops are for former group members only, not family or friends (AFF has other workshops for these persons). Topics discussed typically include:

- The nature of psychological manipulation and abuse
- Conditions of thought reform programs
- General recovery needs of former members
- Coping with depression and guilt
- Effects of hypnosis and trance techniques
- Coping with feelings of anger
- Coping with anxiety
- Decision-making
- Reestablishing trust in yourself and others
- Dependency issues
- The grieving process

- Reintegration/identity issues
- Spiritual and philosophical concerns

The workshops are organized and coordinated by Carol Giambalvo, a thought reform consultant, former member of a controversial group, and author/editor of Exit Counseling: A Family Intervention and The Boston Movement: Critical Perspectives on the International Churches of Christ (Herbert L. Rosedale, co-editor). Ms. Giambalvo serves AFF as Director of Recovery Programs, which include workshops, special publications, professional liaison, and outreach.

Workshops for People Born or Raised in Cultic Groups

The International Cultic Studies Association (ICSA) has run workshops for former members of high-demand, "cultic" groups for many years. In recent years increasing numbers of people born or raised in such groups (i.e., "second generation adults" - SGAs) have attended these workshops. These ex-members have special needs, which can be most effectively addressed through a workshop that focuses on them. SGAs do not have a "pre-cult identity" to which they can return. SGAs raised in fringe subcultures have to learn the implicit rules and expectations of mainstream culture. SGAs frequently have educational and other skill deficits that interfere with adjustment to mainstream culture. Having grown up in high-control groups that are often based on irrational belief systems, SGAs tend to struggle with issues of dependency, self-esteem, and social conflict. Because many SGAs were physically or sexually abused, they often have to deal with anger, resentment, and other emotions related to trauma.

This workshop will address the needs of SGAs through a series of brief didactic presentations (supplemented by written handouts) followed by discussions, to which attendees may contribute according to their comfort levels. Specifically, the workshop will address:

- critical thinking
- socialization, culture shock, and acculturation
- psychological development, child abuse and neglect, parenting styles, boundaries, and trust

- long-term psychological, educational, and emotional effects of growing up in a culture of abuse and neglect
- relationships with families and others

Family Workshops

Topics discussed typically include:

- The nature of psychological manipulation and abuse
- Why people join and leave high-control, abusive groups
- How to assess your situation
- How to communicate more effectively with your loved one
- Problem-solving
- Formulating a helping strategy
- When exit counseling might be appropriate and how to prepare
- Ethical issues
- Special concerns of spouses
- How to help your loved one after he or she leaves the group
- How to cope with apparent helplessness without losing hope

ICSA Family Workshops were developed and coordinated by Livia Bardin, M.S.W., a retired therapist. Ms. Bardin also serves as Book Review Editor of Cultic Studies Review. She is author of Coping with Cult Involvement: A Handbook for Families and Friends.

Using www.icsahome.com

If you go to www.icsahome.com, you'll find three sections on the home page.

In the middle is a brief narrative on who we are and what we do.

To the right is a special box where we list news of note (e.g., conference announcement) or particular sections of the site to which we want to draw attention.

To the left are links to the major areas of the site (e.g., conferences, workshops, membership, members e-library), as well as other ICSA Web sites: Cultic Studies Review and our online bookstore.

Also on the left are links to lists of the following kinds of documents:

- Articles
- book reviews
- links
- profiles of people/organizations.

We have well over 1,000 documents in total available free on the site, as well as 13,000+ documents in the member e-library.

Individual articles, book reviews, links, or profiles are coded so that they form collections on specific groups, topics, study guides, or for certain categories of people, e.g., former group members, families, mental health professionals.

Click on "Groups," "Study Guides," "Topics," or one of the person categories to find out what collections we have and what documents are in them. Many of the collections are, in essence, free online books.

We also have a "News" link on the left that brings you to a special page in which we present recent news on research and educational activities, new books/articles/videos, and specific groups. Visit this page regularly – put it in your favorites – to keep up with news and events.

The “e-Newsletter” link to the left brings you to a list of the current and past ICOSA e-Newsletters, which are published three times a year.

At the time of publication, we had the following study guide collections:

- academic dialogue/disputes
- children
- clergy
- conversion
- critical thinking
- cults 101
- custody-forensic

- women

We have hundreds of profiles, group pages, articles, book reviews, and links - too many to list.

When exploring this site, please keep in mind that it is constantly being developed, refined, and maintained. We welcome your feedback and will do all that our manpower permits to fix problems that you might point out to us or implement constructive suggestions.
